ABSTRACT

A method is provided. The method comprises loading a memory within a link-based system with a functional test program, executing the functional test program in a processor core of the link-based system, and routing test signals generated during execution of the functional test program to a response agent embedded in the link-based system via an external path.